ABSTRACT

Many people are asking what is the difference between records management and information governance. This presentation takes this question and applies it directly to the MoReq specification. It asks whether MoReq can be used within an information governance framework, rather than as simply a specification underlying an electronic records management platform? The presentation looks at the place of standards and specifications, such as MoReq, in information governance both now and in the future. It also reviews how MoReq's core services and modular structure can be used not just as a part of, but rather as the foundation of, a corporate information governance framework.
